Wiki / STUDENT INFORMATION MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

The Student Information Management System (SIMS) is a web and mobile application developed as part of the course AI23431 – Web Technology and Mobile Application at Rajalakshmi Engineering College (Autonomous), Chennai. The system is designed to digitise and streamline the management of student data within an academic institution. It encompasses a series of nine progressive experiments covering core web technologies including HTML5, CSS3, JavaScript, JavaServer Pages (JSP), and Java Servlets, alongside native Android mobile application development using Java and the Android SDK. The system provides functionalities such as student registration with client-side validation, secure login via HTTP POST, server-side form processing using Java Servlets, dynamic page rendering with JSP, and Android-based tools for arithmetic computation and email communication. The project demonstrates the complete spectrum of front-end, back-end, and mobile development practices, offering a unified platform for students, faculty, and administrators to interact with academic data efficiently and securely.
